

7 Indian Snack Combos Worth Trying in the UK Right Now

There's something genuinely satisfying about opening a box and finding a real spread waiting inside - crisp sev, golden papdi, a scoop of gathiya, and a sweet bite to cool things down. If you grew up on these flavours, or you've only recently discovered them, buying single packets one at a time can start to feel like a slow, expensive way to shop. That's exactly the gap a good multi-buy combo fills.

Rather than grabbing one bag of gathiya on Monday and a separate pack of boondi the following week, a combo box puts a full range together in one order, usually at a better price and with a lot less hassle at checkout. Chandra Foods has been producing traditional Indian and Gujarati snacks since 1985, and its combo range is designed around that exact principle - variety, easy sharing, and everyday convenience.

Below are seven of the best Indian snack combos currently available in the UK, with a plain breakdown of what's in each box and who it's really suited to - whether you're planning a chaat night at home, restocking for tea time, or catering for a full room of guests.

Why choose a combo instead of buying single packs?

If you already know exactly which snack you want, a single pack does the job fine. But the moment you want more than one thing - and most people do - a combo starts to make a lot more sense.

Value is the first reason. Chandra Foods bundles are priced to come out cheaper than buying each item separately, and that saving adds up fast if you're feeding a group or topping up the cupboard regularly. Variety is the second. Depending on the box, you might get anywhere from three to eleven different snacks in one order, which means there's something for the person who wants heat, the one who prefers a milder crunch, and the child who just wants the sweet para.

Then there's convenience - one order, one delivery, nothing to juggle. That's especially useful if you're stocking up ahead of a festival or a weekend gathering and don't want to build a basket item by item. Combos also make an easy gift, arriving as a ready-made hamper of authentic Indian snacks rather than a mismatched selection.

With that covered, here's a closer look at the seven worth knowing about.

1. Best of Chandra Combo - the all-rounder

If you can't decide where to start, this is the one to pick. The Best of Chandra Combo brings together nine classic snacks in a single box: Bhavnagari Gathiya, Fafda, Ratlami Sev, Chakri, Fulwadi, Masala Tum Tum, Masala Boondi, Bhel Puri Mix and Sweet Para.

What sets it apart is how well balanced it is. You get light, crispy Gujarati staples sitting alongside spicier sev and chakri, finished off with a sweet para so it never feels one-note. It's a sensible first order if you're new to the brand and want to sample a bit of everything, and it works just as well as a gift for a family who genuinely appreciates proper home-style snacking.

Best for: first-time orders, tea-time variety, gifting. Serve it as a mixed platter alongside chai, or set the Bhel Puri Mix aside to throw together a quick homemade bhel later.

2. Premium Tea Time Combo - for everyday chai

Plenty of households snack with their tea daily, and this box is built for exactly that habit. The Premium Tea Time Combo is the widest-ranging box in the lineup, covering eleven varieties: Bhavnagari Gathiya, Fully Gathiya, Fafda, Chakri, Masala Papdi, Fulwadi, Masala Tum Tum, Pharsi Puri, Salt & Spicy Para, Black Pepper Papdi and Sweet Para.

The flavour range runs from crisp and savoury to lightly spiced and gently sweet - ideal for anyone reaching for a snack alongside their cup two or three times a week. It also doubles as a solid office snack box, since a wide flavour spread keeps most people happy through a mid-afternoon lull.

Best for: regular tea drinkers, shared offices, and anyone who prefers rotating between different snacks rather than working through one pack at a time.

3. Spicy Crunch Combo - for people who actually want heat

This one doesn't tone anything down. The Spicy Crunch Combo pulls together eight of the bolder snacks in the range, with two packs of each, making it a generously sized box: Ratlami Sev, Thikhi Sev, Thikha Gathiya, Masala Papdi, Thika Para, Fulwadi, Masala Tum Tum and Masala Boondi.

If black pepper, red chilli and a proper kick are what you're after in a snack, this is the box to reach for. Because everything comes in double packs, it's well matched to households full of dedicated spice lovers, movie nights, and busy festive stretches when the snack bowl never seems to stay full. The mix also lends itself to building a shared platter and letting everyone graze.

Best for: spice lovers, larger households, and anyone who finds most shop-bought namkeen a bit too mild.

4. Papdi Chaat Combo - for a proper chaat night at home

Chaat is more enjoyable to build yourself than to buy pre-made, and the Papdi Chaat Combo gives you the crunchy foundations to do exactly that. Inside, you'll find Flat Chaat Papdi, Puffed Chaat Papdi, Besan Papdi, Nylon Sev and Masala Boondi.

These are the sturdy bases and toppings - the assembly is entirely up to you. Layer the papdi with yoghurt, tamarind and mint chutneys, boiled potato, chickpeas, chopped onion and a dusting of chaat masala, then top it off with sev and boondi for texture. The same ingredients work equally well for sev puri or dahi papdi, so a single box can stretch across a few different chaat ideas over the course of a weekend.

Best for: chaat lovers who enjoy the assembly process, family get-togethers, and anyone after restaurant-style street food without stepping outside the kitchen.

5. Family Pani Puri Combo - the simplest way to do pani puri at home

Pani puri is the snack everyone gathers around, and the Family Pani Puri Combo makes hosting it genuinely easy. It pairs around forty crisp puri shells with Nylon Sev and Masala Boondi, giving you the crunchy core of the dish in one family-sized pack.

All that's left to add is the filling and the flavour - mashed potato, chickpeas, chopped onion, fresh coriander, your chosen chutneys and a jug of chilled spiced pani. Part of what makes it work is that it doubles as an activity rather than just a snack; children in particular love filling their own shells, which makes it a dependable crowd-pleaser at family dinners. It's also one of the more approachable boxes if you're trying Chandra Foods for the first time.

Best for: family nights, getting kids involved, and anyone after an authentic pani puri spread without sourcing every component separately.

6. Ultimate Chaat Party Combo - for a bigger crowd

When the guest list grows, this box scales the chaat spread up with it. The Ultimate Chaat Party Combo combines Pani Puri, Flat Chaat Papdi, Puffed Chaat Papdi, Besan Papdi, Nylon Sev, Masala Boondi, Pharsi Puri and Fully Gathiya.

Think of it as the two chaat boxes above merged into one larger party version. With puri shells, several styles of papdi and plenty of crunchy toppings, you can set up a proper street-style station and let guests build their own pani puri, papdi chaat or bhel. It's a strong option for festive gatherings, birthdays, or any occasion where laying out a spread beats plating individual portions.

Best for: parties, festivals and celebrations where a self-serve chaat table does the entertaining on its own.

7. Premium Everyday Nuts Combo - for lighter, everyday grazing

Not every craving calls for something fried, and it's worth keeping a lighter option on hand. The Premium Everyday Nuts Combo brings together six one-kilogram bags of natural nuts: Almonds, Cashews, Walnut Halves, Hazelnuts, Brazil Nuts and Pecans.

These are plain, unseasoned nuts with nothing added, which makes them genuinely versatile. Keep a bowl out for daytime grazing, scatter them over porridge or breakfast, blend them into smoothies, or use them for baking and desserts. Suitable for vegans and vegetarians, this box quietly balances out a cupboard full of savoury snacks and is a practical pick for anyone who goes through nuts regularly.

Best for: everyday healthy snacking, breakfast and baking, and rounding out an order with something wholesome.

How to pick the right combo for you

The easiest way to decide is to think about the occasion first, rather than the individual snacks.

If you want a bit of everything, the Best of Chandra Combo is the natural starting point. For daily tea-time snacking, the Premium Tea Time Combo gives you the widest rotation, while the Spicy Crunch Combo is the one to go for if heat is the whole point. Planning to cook something yourself? The Papdi Chaat Combo suits an intimate chaat night, the Family Pani Puri Combo keeps things simple and fun, and the Ultimate Chaat Party Combo covers a full room of guests. And if you're rounding out the cupboard with something a bit lighter, the Premium Everyday Nuts Combo fits that role.

A few practical points are worth bearing in mind. Most of the savoury combos are prepared with wheat, and some contain dairy and sesame, so it's always worth checking individual pack details if you're catering around allergies. Everything is made in the UK and freshly packed, and resealing each pack after opening keeps the crunch where it should be.

The bottom line

Buying Indian snacks online in the UK gets a lot easier once you let a combo do the heavy lifting. You get more variety, better value than buying pack by pack, and a single box that's ready for tea time, a chaat night, or a full celebration - all arriving together in one delivery.

Whatever the occasion, there's a bundle here to match it, from a gentle everyday assortment to a full party spread. If you'd like to see the full lineup side by side, it's worth browsing the complete range of multi-buy combos and picking the one that fits your table.
